Making Indiana Great

CORE VALUES
WE VALUE, RESPECT, AND PROMOTE...
• Excellence
• A student-centered environment
• A faculty/staff-focused environment
• Diversity
• Integrity
• Community engagement
• Innovation
Ivy Tech Community College has a complex mission that impacts a wide variety of stakeholders. Nevertheless, our primary focus remains the same as it was when the College was founded in 1963: enabling our students to succeed, thereby giving our employers access to a world-class workforce.

Our 50th anniversary provides us with perspective not only on the importance of this work, but the degree to which it has been enabled by the partners who help make this work possible. And of all these partners, one stands out as especially critical to our success: our donors. Thanks to those who give to Ivy Tech Foundation, we continue to serve more students each year, equip our facilities consistent with the 21st century working environment, and attract the talented faculty and staff members who make Ivy Tech such a unique institution. We simply could not do it without you.

After all, it is you, our donors, who have made Ivy Tech the largest college in Indiana. It is you who have helped us become a model for other community colleges nationwide. Most importantly, it is you who have given our students access to the education they need to reach their goals. Every time a graduate receives an Ivy Tech diploma, our donors are there in spirit, as part of the celebration.

We are grateful, therefore, for your past support—and eager to invite you to be part of Ivy Tech’s future as well. As we continue to Change Lives, our need for your partnership remains. We assure you it’s one of the best investments we will ever make, paying dividends for decades to come.

Thank you!

Sincerely,

John M. Murphy

Planned giving donations are a critical source of funding for Ivy Tech Community College. Last year, Ivy Tech received approximately $3.8 million in planned gifts. These dollars are used to provide scholarships, improve or build facilities, and support numerous academic programs.

That’s the avenue Fred and Mary Powers chose when considering how they could best support Ivy Tech. The couple made a planned gift to support scholarships for students in the College’s technology trades programs.

The couple cared deeply for the community they called home. The Powerses lived most of their lives in the Richmond area, where Fred made a career as owner of Power House Restaurants and in farming. He also served on the Wayne County Council for over 30 years. Mary became a role model to those around her, building a reputation of strength and grace. She donated resources to several Wayne County organizations.

“They were interested in a vibrant and vital business community, a strong educational system that focused both on academic preparation and vocational training, and a strong community that provided people with job opportunities and a good standard of living,” reflects Sarah Johnson, Fred’s daughter and Mary’s stepdaughter.

Because they grew up in the Great Depression, the Powerses also closely watched the financial well-being of the local economy. Fred, in particular, was interested in bringing vocational training to Wayne County to give students access to a better education and, in turn, better employment prospects. He got his wish when Ivy Tech chose to locate a facility in Richmond.

“Both of my parents were very pleased when Ivy Tech came to Richmond,” Johnson says, “and—of course—deeply satisfied to see it respond with vocational training aligned with the educational needs of the people and businesses in eastern Indiana.”

Fred passed away in 1993, followed by Mary in 2011. It was important to them and their family members that their legacy of charitable giving and commitment to their community live on. Accordingly, the Powerses established a planned giving fund to support Ivy Tech long into the future.

Those dollars will benefit countless students—possibly even the next generation of the Powers family. John Powers, Fred’s youngest son, says that makes the family even greater advocates for the College.

“From computer classes to refrigeration repair, several Powers descendants have received educational training at Ivy Tech,” he says. “Fred and Mary’s granddaughter received her associate of applied science from the College, and their great-granddaughter is enrolled in the dual credit program, completing some English courses while in high school. These are the kinds of opportunities Ivy Tech can and does provide to this community. My parents would have been so proud to be part of that.”

Listed below are donors who have made gifts or pledges to Ivy Tech Foundation for the period July 1, 2012 through June 30, 2013. We extend our sincerest thanks to all of our donors for giving to Ivy Tech Foundation. Their generosity has the power to Change Lives and Make Indiana Great.

COOKING UP SOMETHING GREAT
KEN LICKLIDER MAKES PERU CULINARY LAB A REALITY

The hospitality industry is the largest private sector employer in the U.S., offering exciting, fulfilling career options for those who have a passion for food and service. Thanks to a generous donation, Ivy Tech Community College students in Peru can now start their career close to home.

Ken Licklider, owner of Vohne Liche Kennels, was among those who had the foresight to understand the potential in a renovation at the Peru Ivy Tech site. The College had planned to turn the kitchen into a culinary arts lab and classroom, but more funding was needed. That’s when Licklider stepped up with a gift of nearly $75,000.

“That gave us the final nudge,” says Ivy Tech Kokomo Region Chancellor Steve Daily. “This is going to be a very popular program that will grow rapidly.”

The new lab offers credit courses and short-term, non-credit courses. Students who enroll in credit classes can earn a culinarian certificate that can get them started on a Culinary Arts degree.

Licklider and his family cut the ribbon at an event celebrating the lab’s opening. He says the gift to Ivy Tech was made in the spirit of giving back to a community that has given him so much.

“The community has been very supportive of us,” Licklider says. “We have enjoyed growing our business right here in Miami County and had much success. We’ve kind of been sitting back and observing this community to see just where we might have the most impact. We know all about training and how important it is so we decided that investing in education, like so many of you have done, is a really good fit for us.”

Located in northern Miami County, Vohne Liche Kennels is an international leader in K-9 training. Its full-service training facility has trained over 5,000 police and military service dogs and served a variety of agencies, including the Pentagon police, U.S. State Department, U.S. Army and more than 500 civilian and police agencies.

“Ken knows firsthand the value of having the best learning environment,” Chancellor Daily states. “Choosing to create a state-of-the-art lab at the College proves that commitment. Not only will this benefit students in Miami County but also others in the region who have an interest in culinary classes.”

Jim Tidd, executive director of Economic Development in Miami County, was instrumental in facilitating the gift. He sees the facility as an excellent workforce development tool and an asset that will serve the region well long into the future.

“The donation by Ken Licklider and Vohne Liche Kennels provides a tremendous opportunity for Ivy Tech’s Peru site and for students throughout the region,” says Tidd. “This new lab will add another dimension to the learning opportunities at Ivy Tech right here in Miami County.

Consecutive Giving and Total Giving

The numbers appearing after a donor’s name indicate the number of consecutive years of giving, followed by the total number of years of giving since 1987. For example, “8/16” would indicate that the donor has given eight years in a row and has given to Ivy Tech a total of 16 years from the time our computer records were established in 1987 through June 30, 2013.

GM FINDS UNIQUE PARTNER IN IVY TECH

An important part of the Ivy Tech Community College mission is providing technical and vocational educational programs—oftentimes, training that would be unavailable otherwise. The College works directly with businesses to understand their ever-changing workforce needs, then creates programs that prepare students for the 21st century workplace. It’s a proven approach that benefits both employers and students graduating with the credentials they need to succeed.

One excellent example of this relationship is Ivy Tech’s partnership with General Motors. The two entities have worked closely for many years through the General Motors Automotive Service Education Program, also known as GM ASEP. This comprehensive, two-year cooperative training program provides a unique opportunity for Ivy Tech to assist in meeting the needs of new, qualified automotive technicians in General Motors’ dealer and ACDelco Professional Service Centers (PSC). GM ASEP students alternate between classroom and lab learning environments on the Ivy Tech campus while gaining hands-on, “earn while you learn” work experience at a sponsoring GM dealership or ACDelcoPSC.

Additionally, as a demonstration of their commitment to training technicians on newer, high tech automobiles, General Motors donates vehicles to its educational partners for training purposes. Ivy Tech has received vehicle donations over the course of the relationship.

“General Motors is very active and involved in supporting many local and community organizations,” says Todd Dawn, GM ASEP Program Manager at General Motors. “Donations such as the ones to Ivy Tech support GM’s fundamental belief in supporting educational programs to train future technicians—and train them well. Ivy Tech plays a valuable role in this by meeting the rigid requirements necessary to be one of only 57 GM ASEP schools nationally.”

Ivy Tech’s Indianapolis campus is the sole facility in Indiana that teaches GM ASEP coursework.

Students who master the program earn an associate degree of applied science in automotive technology with the added bonus of having completed up to 85% of the GM Service Technical College (STC) required training. This translates into graduates who are GM trained and ready to start a full-time career immediately. With the help of partners like Ivy Tech, the GM ASEP program has produced over 16,000 service technicians since 1979.

“Ivy Tech has played an important role by providing a source of entry level technicians via GM ASEP,” Dawn praises. “The strong partnership with GM, the dealers, and Ivy Tech has created a very strategic source for these entry level technicians.”

Todd Dawn of General Motors calls Ivy Tech a valuable partner in its ASEP training program.

HONOR ROLL | IVY TECH FOUNDATION ANNUAL REPORT
In Evansville, the Browning family name is synonymous with giving. The Brownings have been associated with several philanthropic efforts, and one of the greatest beneficiaries of their generosity is Ivy Tech Community College.

In the fall of 2008, the Browning family helped fund a 2,500-square-foot, state-of-the-art facility for hospitality students. The project had outgrown its previous accommodations, and the Brownings recognized the need for a hands-on, immersive training environment. In honor of the family’s support and vision on the project, the facility was named the Charles and Dolores Browning Family Foundation Culinary Arts Center.

“The culinary arts are so very important to all vibrant communities,” says Dr. Mark Browning, son of Charles and Dolores. “On-the-job training is where most students learn their skills. Ivy Tech does the community a valuable service by teaching students the proper way to prepare, serve, and present food for customers at varied types of restaurants or catering events. We are honored to be part of that, through the culinary arts facility.”

The family also supports another career training initiative: the Global Business Enhancement Fund, which was established in 2012 to help fund internship and job shadowing opportunities. In its first year, the fund helped pay for an Ivy Tech student’s internship with SS&C Technologies in downtown Evansville. The student received hands-on, practical experience that ultimately led to an employment opportunity.

But the Brownings’ generosity doesn’t stop there. Since 2005, five endowed scholarships supported under their name have helped a wide variety of students achieve their educational goals. Dr. Browning explains how the scholarships serve a dual purpose: they offer financial assistance to students in need while also memorializing the Browning family legacy of giving back to the community.

“You could say we have a heritage for giving,” Dr. Browning says. “Our family understands that the next generation of our community is vital to its enhanced, sustained growth. Seeds germinate and flourish if given the proper nourishment and environment. We continue to care for those seeds by giving back year after year with endowed scholarships that give future generations a chance of making the best of their abilities by attaining an education at Ivy Tech.”

Citing the College’s considerable enrollment growth, Dr. Browning contends that Ivy Tech is worthy of support at the local, regional, and statewide level. To ensure success and growth in our communities in the future, he explains, we must invest in our colleges and students today.

“Ivy Tech students come from various backgrounds and experiences,” Dr. Browning says. “Many of them are first generation advanced education students. Their life experiences often make them cherish education more than the average student. Our family hopes to further these students’ education by decreasing some of their financial burden through these endowed scholarships. The businesses in our community support Ivy Tech because they see real value in the students graduating from the College—and so does our family.”

Consecutive Giving and Total Giving

The numbers appearing after a donor’s name indicate the number of consecutive years of giving, followed by the total number of years of giving since 1987. For example, “8/16” would indicate that the donor has given eight years in a row and has given to Ivy Tech a total of 16 years from the time our computer records were established in 1987 through June 30, 2013.”

Consecutive Giving and Total Giving

The numbers appearing after a donor’s name indicate the number of consecutive years of giving, followed by the total number of years of giving since 1987. For example, “8/16” would indicate that the donor has given eight years in a row and has given to Ivy Tech a total of 16 years from the time our computer records were established in 1987 through June 30, 2013.

Consecutive Giving and Total Giving

The numbers appearing after a donor’s name indicate the number of consecutive years of giving, followed by the total number of years of giving since 1987. For example, “8/16” would indicate that the donor has given eight years in a row and has given to Ivy Tech a total of 16 years from the time our computer records were established in 1987 through June 30, 2013.
