Ivy Tech Community College of Indiana

POLICY TITLE
Distance Education Course Scheduling

POLICY NUMBER
4.5 (formerly APPM 5.1 & 5.2)

PRIMARY RESPONSIBILITY
Faculty and staff with responsibility for building course schedules

CREATION / REVISION / EFFECTIVE DATES
May 2001/Revised June 2012/Effective June 2012

PURPOSE
Ivy Tech utilizes a single, statewide calendar for all distance education courses. Regions may apply for an exemption for their traditional courses to this calendar – however all distance education courses are to still follow the distance education calendar. This policy explains course specific calendar exception procedures as well as other scheduling considerations for all types of distance courses. This policy also addresses limits to online course section size.

ORGANIZATIONAL SCOPE OR AUDIENCE
All faculty and staff involved in the design and delivery of any type of distance education courses

DEFINITIONS
Distance education courses: All currently recognized types of distance education courses offered at Ivy Tech Statewide Academic Common Calendar, as defined in 6.10 - Distance Education Course Design and Development. Where a distinction is made for a specific type of course, that course type name will specifically be used in this policy.

POLICY
All distance education courses are to follow the statewide distance education calendar, with the exception of intra-regional two way and synchronous video courses which may be offered on the region’s approved calendar.

Online courses must have no more than 30 students per course section.

PROCEDURE
Distance education courses are scheduled by each campus/region primarily to meet the enrollment needs of that campus/region. Instructions for creating courses with a Distance delivery method are outlined in the Distance Education job aid for Banner.

While courses are scheduled and maintained regionally, the college may undertake efforts to reduce redundancy in course offerings as a means of creating a more efficient delivery system. This may include such activities as reviewing course enrollments at a system-wide level, recruiting faculty through a central pool for the instruction of non-place bound distance courses, and encouraging cooperation among regions to reduce the amount of unused capacity or to facilitate additional sections of high demand courses.

Distance education courses follow a common calendar statewide, regardless of the student or faculty members' campus location. In addition, all distance education courses, regardless of delivery method, are scheduled in Eastern Time. Campuses which operate in a different time zone or have different intra-term break dates must accommodate students who may need access to the building for video courses earlier or later in the day than normal business hours. In addition, these campuses may need to continue to provide services such as test proctoring and tutoring to their students during campus breaks.

If faculty are teaching both distance education courses and on campus courses in a region or regions with calendars that differ from the Statewide Distance Education Calendar, the faculty members are still responsible for conducting all aspects of the distance education course during the on-campus course breaks and vice versa.

If a region wishes to offer a distance education course outside of the common calendar for distance education – with the exception of intra-regional video or synchronous courses which may be offered on the region’s approved alternate calendar without additional exception - they must complete the Distance Education Common Calendar Exception Form and receive approval of that exception, prior to scheduling the course.

Online Course Section Size

All online courses (those coded with an I) are limited to a maximum of 30 students in the course. Regions should take into consideration a variety of factors including but not limited to instructor experience, course assignments and activities, and course length when determining the actual course size. However, no online course may exceed 30 students. In the rare instance where an exception to this size is granted, the requesting region must complete the Online Section Size Exception Form and have that approved before increasing the section size to accommodate the student.
