Ivy Tech Community College realizes the value of a global educational experience. A better understanding of global issues is imperative to a productive world citizen. A cultural emersion can bring a better understanding of world issues and what roles individuals and nations play in solving or creating, international problems.

Knowing that our graduates have the right kind of skills is paramount to our mission. To deliver the right skills is critical to the new economy — analytical thinking and the ability to work across cultural and international boundaries to the widest range of workers.

Students who are able to participate in study abroad courses will be enlightened, engaged, and informed as to how interconnected the world is. They will be exposed to the relationship between different countries and the United States and will be immersed in other cultures and traditions. The students will be made aware of the commerce, foreign infrastructure and politics as well as gain an appreciation for early and modern history.

“My advice to anyone thinking about studying abroad in India would be to first stop thinking about it and GO! Then, abandon your comfort zone, try EVERYTHING, and be as curious as possible. You will be stunned at the majesty India has to offer and delighted about how it will change your life.”

In partnership with the University of Evansville, Ivy Tech Community College has been hosting study abroad programs at Harlaxton College, the British campus of the University of Evansville, in Grantham, England for six years.

Students will have an unforgettable experience as they spend two weeks living in a 100-room Victorian manor house located in the English countryside. The manor features a great hall, a long gallery, a conservatory, and a cedar staircase among other beautiful architectural features. Participants will share the manor with students from UE and other partner colleges as well as faculty and staff.

During their stay, students will tour the manor and grounds, tour Belvoir Castle, take a day trip to London, tour the British museum, visit Kings College in Cambridge, visit Stonehenge and much more!

“I’ve learned to not simply expect acceptance, but to give it as openly as the people we met during our travels did. What an experience.”
Kelsey Branstrator, Study Abroad 2014

“Hands-on learning at its finest.”
Penny Lloyd, Study Abroad 2014

Course: PSYC-253 – Intro to Social Psychology

India is one of the oldest civilizations on earth and provides a rich culture with diverse experiences. The country is secular with the largest democracy in the world and offers visitors the opportunity to experience several religions and philosophies that focus on a peaceful existence with others and nature.

India is also a strong contender for a permanent seat on the Security Council of the United Nations and has emerged as a helpful world country. The economy is growing at a rapid pace which makes it attractive to big companies. This study abroad program is designed to introduce students to non-western ways of thinking and provide a forum for deep self-reflection.

Participants will visit India’s “Golden Triangle” of Delhi, Agra, and Jaipur.

Students will have the opportunity to explore Delhi, the capital of India, visit the Gate of India, the Lotus Temple, Raj Ghat-Gandhi Memorial and museum and other points of interest. They will also visit Agra, home of the Taj Mahal, the Red Fort and the famous “Pink City of India” Jaipur. During their stay in Jaipur, students will have the opportunity to explore the city through various excursions.

Prerequisite: PSYC-101 or SOCI-101
